

Photo from the Right Livelihood Award

“I severed my ties with the trends imposed by the economic establishment, disengaged myself from ‘objective abstractions’ and... stepped into the mud.”

The “barefoot economist” talks to E4A

Thursday, December 8, 2016 @ 2:30 p.m.

Room 281

Faculty of Environmental Studies, York University

RSVP to mjuncos@yorku.ca

E4A peers at McGill and Vermont will join via ZOOM

Dr. Manfred Max-Neef, internationally renowned for his “Barefoot Economics” and “Human Scale Development” proposals, shares his vision for a new economy. [\[Read more about Dr. Manfred Max-Neef\]](#)

Dr. Max-Neef has contributed significantly to alternatives for socioeconomically just and ecologically viable development, in opposition to the irrational growth paradigm promoted by the predominant capitalist economic regime. His contributions have primarily focused in the so-called developing countries in Latin America, and based on well-founded principles and ethics for well-being.

Economics for the Anthropocene
Regrounding the human - Earth relationship